Sadly , most think all you need to do is throw together five hundred words and submit them to E zine Articles . This approach will get you some traffic to your websites and offers .

It is not a long term , set and forget, profit venture .

Writing articles for profit , or better known as article marketing , requires several key components for it to work and succeed to it's full potential.

Those components include, but are not limited to.

- > Keyword research .
- > Competition analysis.
- > Proper article formatting .
- > Submission and syndication.
- > Article promotion.

If your article is going to get traction and continue to gain momentum, it must reside on a solid article marketing foundation.

This foundation is keywords and to drill even deeper , proper keyword research .

If people , preferably customers , are not actively searching for your selected keywords , the best you can hope for is the limited traffic that comes from the article directories themselves .

Competition analysis is just as important as a well researched keyword campaign.

Knowing what weapons your competition used to get to their rankings in the search engines is a must . marketers need to be able to fight the fight with at least , if not better, weapons at their disposal.

Proper article formatting assures that search engines find your articles , readers are captivated , and are led to the "money click."

Realizing that only submitting to one directory is short sighted, and syndication to multiple directories is paramount , will see your traffic totals expand greatly .

Last but nowhere near least , learning advanced article promotion will cement your articles in the search engines and provide a true set and forget environment .

Allowing you to move to the next project or take that much needed rest .

When considering writing articles for profit , a little marketing skills will go a long way in your article marketing ventures .
